ASSP Common Interest Groups

Did you know that ASSP offers common interest groups designed to support EHS professionals from different age groups, ethnic backgrounds, and genders? Membership is open to all ASSP members, not just those who identify with a particular group. They're ideal for anyone looking to expand their knowledge, become a more inclusive leader, and gain a deeper insight into different perspectives. ASSP currently supports several common interest groups, including:

Blacks in Safety Excellence – Advances all people of color through professional development, networking, collaboration, mentorship, and education with approximately 1,500 members.

Women in Safety Excellence – Focuses on tackling the specific workplace and industry challenges that women face through education, mentorship, networking, research, and innovation with approximately 2,000 members.

Hispanic Safety Professionals – Advances Hispanics and Latinos through professional development, networking, education, and collaboration with approximately 500 members.

Emerging Professionals in Occupational Safety and Health – Identifies, develops, and connects young leaders who possess a passion to expand their knowledge and promote the OSH profession with approximately 4,000 members.

MEMBER HIGHLIGHT: Cardiel Luna

Cardiel has over 25 years of EHS experience. As a safety consultant, he supports a range of industries including construction, pharmaceuticals, aerospace, utilities, and more. He enjoys working with individuals who recognize the importance of safety, and finds great fulfillment in engaging with those who may be skeptical, helping them to understand the critical value of EHS.

The Los Angeles Chapter of the ASSP is dedicated to promoting the safety profession through increased public awareness and providing opportunities for networking and professional growth. To become a member or to ask any questions, please contact one of our Chapter officers (<http://la.assp.org/chapter-officers/>). Stay in the know - follow us on LinkedIn HERE.
